

Wise questions for post-election conversations

What would you like me to know about what your vote means to you?

What values that are important to you were, and were not represented or expressed by your candidate?

What should we be talking about now that we're not?

What would help you to hear as legitimate the fears or hopes of others?

What values, curiosities, or visions for the future are drawing you to engage with others here?

What would it look like to build stronger relationships, even when we're under duress?

Tell me a story from your personal experience that led you to hold certain issues as vital for you in this election.

What did you learn growing up at home about being a good citizen?

What's at the heart of moving forward?

What single value do you think best defines the greatness of America?

What do you think is the single biggest threat to the greatness of America?

Tell me a memory of your first public event. What did that teach you about the world?

What is the contribution of [insert group] to the success of America?

What is the invitation that we are not seeing in this moment of duress?

What would change look like for you?
